The negro Senator in Congress is only a dark speck of a social possibility which can not iail to puzzle and embarrase future legisla-tion. The conduct of the Southern govern-ments is not only degrading to the freedom and intelligence of the people, but ominous of State and Federal complications which will probably outlast the century. The when, at the same time, you are sating layers, as the same time, you are sating layers, as the southern governing to the freedom you are saking favors; but this is precisely what the Cincinnati papers are doing all the time. They never miss a chance to abuse Kentucky. We are alternately a mest of traitors who ought to be hanged, ligitation which, at set a precedent of centralization which, af-ter having reduced the six New England States into a single State, will ultimate in imperialism. Meanwhile the currency and nest of traitors who ought to be hanged, or a den of Bourbons who ought to be turned over to the fool-killer. No term of opprobrium or of riducule is too servere to suit the malevolence of the Republican journals of Cincinnati. Their abuse is he tariff are to keep the pot boiling; and the tariff are to keep the pot boiling; and ances to be arranged which give promise of soiling Mr. Drake's bouquet and baffling Mr. Wilson's genial hopes. But, after all, what does Mr. Drake or Mr. Wilson care? Their idea is to perpetuate themselves by preserving the power and organization of the Republican party. This can not be accomplished, they think, by the old popular methods; so, conceiving the positive philosophy that "money makes the mare go," they hitch onto the capital of the country; they ocuple with corporations, they ask it of them, her people would laugh to scorn. She is asking unheard of privileges—unexampied advantages—ask-ing, nay, demanding these with a bogus ten-million check in one hand and a threat of Congressional coercion in the other. The last issue of the Maysville (Kv.) Bulletin savs. league with the bondholder; they tax the r to satisfy the rich; and they are paid doomely for their work. So, what do

But to give the most liberal of cnarrers. Dut to give a foreign city, and a quintette of foreign managers, a fee simple upon a strip of Kentucky soil a couple of hundred miles long, without ity dishonors. The press which is worth preserving is able to pay its own way. A any guarantee of protection to ourselves, not to be thought of. It is simply prep terous in itself, and provocative of endless litigation in the Federal courts. Let Cina press, which is not only the hanger-on of Providence, but the stipendiary of Con-gress, cannot fail to degrade itself; to cor-resps its readers, and to scatter darkness instead of light over the country. clinati settle her constitutional questions in her own way, or let her build her rell to build a road for her, and then to relin quish all right and title and claim upon Every newspaper should be charged for all its issues that pass through the mails, the offspring of our own money. WEDNESDAY BORNING, PERRUARY 16,1870 ROUND-ABOUT.

I. Hamiet. Hamies.

This melancholy young gentleman is quite a dramatic lion in New York. He has been ogled and petted to death at Booth's theater, and been sighed at and sympathised with at Niblo's, where in the person of Mr. Fechter he appeared to be less depressed in a fixen wig than in the somber locks of Mr. Booth. The public has been engaged for weeks in rushing one night to see Booth and another to see Fechter in the part. And now comes rushing one night to see Booth and another to see Fechter in the part. And now comes Hsmlet, in the person of Mr. G. L. Fox, a very clever burlesque actor, in a racy burlesque of the great play, at the Olympic, written by T. C. DeLeon, Eaq., of Mobile, a showy and pungent writer and satirist, in which the young Dane gives the public an entirely new view of his subtle character, takes off most happily the follies of the day, and the stage stiffness and unnaturalness of the old-flashloned drama, in away that makes even Booth and Fechter laugh.

The combination of a recitation of "Mid-summer Night's Dream," followed, or rather Interspersed, with an instrumental perform-ance of Mendelsschn's music writtes thereon, some time since, by those two very accom-plished artists, Mrs. Secti Saidons and M'lle Alida Topp, the great pianist, probably sug-gested the idea to Mr. Edward Mollenhauer, a violinist of good reputation in New York (who is one of two very musical brothers), to write what he calls "a descriptive symphonic tone painting," taking for his subject Collins' cele-brated 'Olds to the Passions," Which was to is one of two very musical brothers), to write what he calls "a descriptive symphonic tone painting," taking for his subject Collins' celebrated "Ode to the Passions," which was to be recited by Mr. Edwin Booth, in connection with the performance by an orchestra of the music. The first production of this literary and musical combination has just taken place is New York with the most flattering success, it may possibly interest our musical readers to know that Mr. Mollenhauer described "The Passions" as a whole, first, by an overture, the assemblare of "The Passions" by an quadrate that Mr. Mollenhauer described. The Pas-sicins, as whole, first, by an overture, the assemblage of "The Passions," by an andamic grandiness movement, Fear by an agistot agus-sionate, Anger by an aligny furious, Hope by a moderate (chorus and vocal solo), Revence by an agistate molie, Jealousy by a presse, Mel-sucholy by an andamic melanchotyna, Cheerlai-ness by an alignetic scheramide, Joy by an alignet scheramide, Joy by an alignetic molie of the properties of the second to whole concluding with a grand chorus and finale. The subject is an admirable and highly suggestive one for musical treatment, and in the hands of a composer gifted with a rich imagination and appreciative tasts is ca-pable of being beautifully worked up.

The Wandering Jew. The Wandering Jew.

The public is probably familiar with the foil Kahn-Nathan Davis difficulty. They here once partners in the podding business, dut disagreed, and ever since each has been trying to trump up a charge that would get ine other into the pententiary, if not some clace worse. They are both familiar characters among the court officials, and have been so for a long time. Wolf Kahn is now being tried in the Chemit Court for stealing the Chancery Court records, and Nathan Davis is the principal prosecuting witness. Able counsel is employed on both sides, and the case will have occupied a week of the court's time before it is through with.

Gen. Jackson, in his argument before the jury restorday, gave Nathan Davis a severe excortation. He cited the legend in which it is Gen. Jackson, in his argument before the jury praierdar, gare Nathan Bavis a severe excordation. He cited the legred in which it is said that, as the Saviour was bearing the heavy cross to the place of crucifiction, he stopped at the door of a rine jew, and, tired and bleeding at swery pore, asked to all down on the door-step and rest; but the Jew said, "No; you shall not rest. Go on, go on." The Saviour thes intraed to him and said, "You shill go on to the end of the world." That wame Jew is the law supposed to be weadering over the earth, unable to the, and in love with day to point out this dammed and outcast inclivious, accursed of God and hated by man, is would not go out of the court-room, but joint to Nathan Davis as the man.
